

Police officials look over the scene after a bombing at St. Sebastian Church in Negombo, Sri Lanka, April 21, 2019. At least 200 people were killed and hundreds more injured on Easter Sunday in Sri Lanka when attackers unleashed an apparently coordinated series of bombings that simultaneously targeted Christian churches and luxury hotels. (CNS/Reuters)

Cindy Wooden

View Author Profile

Catholic News Service

View Author Profile

Join the Conversation

Send your thoughts to Letters to the Editor. Learn more

Vatican City — April 22, 2019

Share on FacebookShare on TwitterEmail to a friendPrint

The Gospel reading (Mt 28:8-15) recounts how "the women, full of fear and joy, were rushing to go bring the news to the disciples that the tomb was empty," the pope said. "At that moment, Jesus presents himself to them. 'They approached, embraced his feet, and did him homage.' "

"They touched him," he said. "It was not a ghost. It was Jesus, alive, in the flesh. It was him. Jesus drives fear from their hearts and encourages them to proclaim to the brothers what happened."

In Jesus, the pope said, all who have been baptized pass from death to life, "from slavery to sin to the freedom of love."

The church celebrates Easter for an entire week, he said, because it is a time to allow oneself to be "touched by the consoling message of Easter and wrapped in its glorious light, which dissipates the darkness of fear and sadness."

The risen Lord walks alongside all those who call upon him and love him, the pope said. He is present, "first of all in prayer, but also in simple joys lived with faith and gratitude" when people are enjoying friendships, welcoming others or contemplating nature.

"Christ's resurrection was the most shocking event in human history," the pope said. It attests to "the victory of God's love over sin and death, and it gives our hope for life a foundation solid as a rock."

Updated 8:05 a.m. Central time April 23, 2019 with most recent death toll

On Easter Monday, Pope Francis led thousands of people in St. Peter's Square in praying for the hundreds of people who died or were injured in bomb blasts the previous day in Sri Lanka.

Pope Francis had already condemned the bombings and offered prayers April 21 after celebrating Easter morning Mass. By April 23, Sri Lankan officials reported more than 300 people killed from the eight blasts at churches and hotels in three cities.

Pope Francis told the crowd gathered in St. Peter's Square for the "Regina Coeli" prayer April 22, "I want to again express my spiritual and paternal closeness to the people of Sri Lanka."

"I pray for the numerous victims and injured," he said, "and I ask everyone not to hesitate to offer this dear nation all the necessary help. I also hope that everyone will condemn these terrorist acts, inhuman acts, that are never justifiable."

In his main talk, the pope said that, like the women who first told the disciples that Jesus had risen from the dead, all Christians are called to encounter the risen Lord and share the good news of his resurrection with the world.

The day's Gospel reading, like other accounts of the resurrection, highlights the role of the women who followed Jesus, he said.

"All the Gospels stress the role of the women — Mary Magdalene and the others — as the first witnesses of the Resurrection," the pope said. "The men, fearful, were closed in the Upper Room."

Advertisement