

The Gospel call to peace in a time of war and terrorism

Thomas Gumbleton | Oct. 30, 2008 The Peace Pulpit

This week we have another video for Bishop Thomas Gumbleton, courtesy of Essential Dissent (see essentialdissent.blogspot.com [1]). Bishop Gumbleton will return to his regular homily schedule with audio and transcripts posted to NCR Cafe next week.

Until then, here's a talk he gave in Endicott, N.Y. on March 8, 2008, during a series of talks for Lent with the theme "The Election and Transforming Issues." The bishop's talk is called: "The Gospel Call to Peace in a Time of War and Terrorism."

The video comes from Wilton Vought's video blog essentialdissent.blogspot.com [1]). This is how Vought describes himself and his work: "I am a videographer living near Montrose, Pa. I videotape events of interest to the peace and justice community, and post them here. I am in the process of posting approximately 50 videos from my former Web site, so there will be quite a few posts through September and into October of 2008. Things will settle down after that."

Source URL (retrieved on 03/03/2015 - 10:46): <http://ncronline.org/blogs/peace-pulpit/gospel-call-peace-time-war-and-terrorism>

Links:

[1] <http://essentialdissent.blogspot.com>