

Spirituality for people turned off by churchy language -- Part 1

NCR Podcasts | Aug. 27, 2009

Kathy Coffey

Episode 1: The holy lurking everywhere (26 min.)

"We don't go to an art museum simply to see art on the wall there," Coffey tells Tom Fox, paraphrasing a Jesuit mentor of hers. "We go to an art museum to be sensitized to beauty everywhere. It is much the same with the church. We don't go to church simply to find holiness there, but to sensitize us to the holiness that is everywhere."

Spirituality for people turned off by churchy language

Kathy Coffey is the author of Hidden Women of the Gospels, Women of Mercy, God in the Moment: Making Every Day a Prayer, (Orbis) Dancing in the Margins (Crossroad), Immersed in the Sacred: Discovering the Small s Sacraments (Ave Maria), catechetical resources such as Children and Christian Initiation, Baptism and Beyond and Confirmation: Anointed and Sealed with the Spirit (Living the Good News), and many articles in Catholic periodicals like America, U.S. Catholic, St. Anthony Messenger and Catechumenate. Coffey on Prayer Coffey tells Tom Fox that she is always suspicious of long meal prayers. "They clearly are written by adults in libraries who haven't had hungry kids around the table, with the 16-year-old keeling over with boredom at one end of the table and the two-year-old is sticking french fries up her nose at the other end of the table. I think we have relax a little bit about prayer and livening things up a little."
