

Yes, the Church 'in' the Modern World!

Thomas C. Fox | Oct. 28, 2009 NCR Today

You can always count on James Carroll to offer an insightful perspective. His latest column [1] in the Boston Globe begins with these words:

The single most eloquent expression of the Catholic Church's Second Vatican Council in 1965 was a preposition - the word "in." The title of the council declaration "The Church in the Modern World" could readily have been expected to be "The Church against the Modern World," reiterating a long-held opposition. Or, a little more positively, it might have been "The Church and the Modern World," defining a gulf between the sacred and the secular that devalues both realms. But instead, the council fathers stated their conviction that the church, neither above nor detached, is integrally a part of the contemporary human condition - happily so. The decree's Latin title "Gaudium et Spes" translates as "Joy and Hope" - an even stronger signal of the council's affirming mind-set.

Source URL (retrieved on 01/27/2015 - 22:31): <http://ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/yes-church-modern-world>

Links:

[1]

http://www.boston.com/bostonglobe/editorial_opinion/oped/articles/2009/10/26/from_vatican_a_tainted_olive_branch/