

Cardinal Burke boosts lavish, Latin liturgy

Robert McClory | Jul. 18, 2012 NCR Today

I think all Catholics should be required to view this video released by the Catholic News Service.

It reveals in vivid color an ideal form of the Mass, as explained by Cardinal Raymond Burke, outgoing prefect of the Supreme Tribunal of the Apostolic Signatura. In my opinion, it reveals more clearly where the institutional church is heading and what can be expected from Rome in the foreseeable future as "abuses" of the liturgy are corrected, Burke says.

The pomp, the color, the splendor, the lavishness, the gold -- especially the impossibly gold vestments, the gold candlesticks, the gold statues -- is just overwhelming. This, Burke explains, is the sort of worship Jesus wants. The video is titled "The Call of Beauty." I wonder what the reaction of thoughtful Catholics might be.

Source URL (retrieved on 01/30/2015 - 13:07): <http://ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/cardinal-burke-boosts-lavish-latin-liturgy>