

Silk Looks at Religious Voting Patterns

Michael Sean Winters | Nov. 9, 2012 Distinctly Catholic

At RNS, Mark Silk takes a quick look [1] at the voting behavior of different religious groups. Catholics, once again, "went with the winner." What is most surprising is that Gov. Romney received a higher share of the white evangelical vote than John McCain did four years ago. Concerns about his Mormon faith did not materialize at the voting booth, and that is a good thing for the country.

Source URL (retrieved on 01/27/2015 - 23:28): <http://ncronline.org/blogs/distinctly-catholic/silk-looks-religious-voting-patterns>

Links:

[1] <http://www.religionnews.com/blogs/mark-silk/religion-and-the-election-short-version>