

German Catholic bishops sack sex abuse study head

Dennis Coday | Jan. 9, 2013 NCR Today

Reuters is reporting that:

Germany's Roman Catholic bishops sacked a criminologist studying sexual abuse of minors by their priests on Wednesday, prompting him to accuse them of trying to censor what was to be a major report on the scandals. ...

Bishop Stephan Ackermann, spokesman on abuse issues for the German Bishops Conference, said the hierarchy had lost confidence in the researcher, criminologist Christian Pfeiffer, and would look for another specialist to take up the study.

Pfeiffer told German Radio the bishops wanted to change previously agreed guidelines for the project to include a final veto over publishing its results, which he could not accept.

Read the full report. [1]

Source URL (retrieved on 01/28/2015 - 22:47): <http://ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/german-catholic-bishops-sack-sex-abuse-study-head>

Links:

[1] <http://in.reuters.com/article/2013/01/09/germany-catholic-abuse-idINDEE9080C220130109>