

Ratzingerian Marxists?

Michael Sean Winters | Jan. 24, 2013 | Distinctly Catholic

Talk about strange bedfellows, and not of the Bridgeport, cross-dressing variety, but of the intellectual variety: Over at First Things [1], Matthew Cantarino reports on how some men of the Left have discovered an unlikely champion in the person of Pope Benedict. How many times do I need to say it: To rescue modernity from itself, the Catholic Church is the only intellectual tradition with the resources to even frame the right questions, let alone point in the direction of good answers.

Source URL (retrieved on 02/01/2015 - 18:40): <http://ncronline.org/blogs/distinctly-catholic/ratzingerian-marxists>

Links:

[1] <http://www.firstthings.com/blogs/firstthoughts/2013/01/23/ratzingerian-marxists-and-the-anthropological-emergency/#more-56094>