

Have we lost the fight for gun control?

Dennis Coday | Mar. 11, 2013 NCR Today

This assessment from Time magazine suggests that we have allowed ourselves to be distracted, and anyone who had grand hopes for significant gun control measures enacted this year are quickly losing the race:

Here's a hard truth: all the emotion and outrage and sadness that followed the Dec. 14 shooting of 20 children and 6 adults at Sandy Hook elementary school may make almost no difference in federal gun control laws. How little is the Hill going to do on gun control? As things stand, Congress [1] may not even pass two gun control measures that even some elements of the powerful gun lobby have suggested they could support. But if post-Sandy Hook gun control measures are badly wounded, they're not finished yet. Lawmakers on both sides of the aisle insist there's still a chance to do a deal; here's the state of play.

How Gun Control Ends: Not With A Bang, But A Whimper [2]By Massimo Calabresi

Source URL (retrieved on 01/29/2015 - 02:34): <http://ncronline.org/blogs/ncr-today/have-we-lost-fight-gun-control>

Links:

[1] <http://topics.time.com/congress/>

[2] <http://swampland.time.com/2013/03/11/how-gun-control-ends-not-with-a-bang-but-a-whimper/?xid=newsletter-daily>