

Dissing Putin

Michael Sean Winters | Aug. 7, 2013 | Distinctly Catholic

A bishop friend always reminds me to be respectful when disagreeing, a reminder I confess I often fail to honor. But, President Obama's decision to diss Vladimir Putin, canceling a planned meeting next month, is entirely appropriate. Putin has a tough job, but the toughness of the job does not require the toughness of his anti-democratic policies. The fact that he is harboring Edward Snowden is not beside the point, although it is of a piece with Putin's anti-democratic tendencies, a fact that does not reflect well on either Snowden or Putin.

Source URL (retrieved on 02/01/2015 - 15:36): <http://ncronline.org/blogs/distinctly-catholic/dissing-putin>

Links:

[1] <http://www.politico.com/story/2013/08/obama-putin-meeting-canceled-edward-snowden-nsa-95285.html?hp=t1>