

US tests missiles as diplomats discuss disarming them

Thomas C. Fox | Sep. 22, 2013 NCR Today

The United States is planning to test nuclear missiles next week on the same day that heads of states and foreign ministers from around the world are to hold a high-level meeting on nuclear disarmament at the United Nations headquarters in New York. Instead of honoring the significance of these dates and working in good faith to achieve nuclear disarmament, the United States has chosen to schedule two tests of its Minuteman III Intercontinental Ballistic Missile on September 22 and September 26, Rick Wayman of the Nuclear Age Peace Foundation^[1] told the Daily Times. We are disappointed that a test launch is scheduled for the same day as the High-Level Meeting on nuclear disarmament at the UN in New York, Wayman said.
