

Liberalism Resurgent in Cities

Michael Sean Winters | Apr. 24, 2014 Distinctly Catholic

In this morning's Washington Post [1], Harold Meyerson on the rise of new liberal leaders in many of America's cities. He notes the importance of unions in the new liberal alliances, which all Catholics should welcome: Unions embody the kind of bread-and-butter economic issues that should be the heart of the liberal political agenda, not the "gendergeist" issues that alienate working class voters from those who champion their interests. I would feel even more confident if, next year, mayors decided to show up for St. Patrick's Day parades!

Source URL (retrieved on 01/31/2015 - 11:56): <http://ncronline.org/blogs/distinctly-catholic/liberalism-resurgent-cities>

Links:

[1] http://www.washingtonpost.com/opinions/harold-meyerson-progressives-take-manhattan-and-many-other-us-places/2014/04/23/8f727cf0-cb17-11e3-a75e-463587891b57_story.html