

Opinion

by Teresa Malcolm

View Author Profile

Join the Conversation

Send your thoughts to Letters to the Editor. Learn more

November 6, 2019

Share on FacebookShare on TwitterEmail to a friendPrint

Our team of copy editors reads and posts most of what you see on the websites for National Catholic Reporter and Global Sisters Report (the NCR project focusing on women religious). The Copy Desk Daily highlights recommended news and opinion articles that have crossed our desks on their way to you.

His dog's gaze and wagging tail illustrated for Brian Swimme a moment in the process of creation, back to the beginnings of life and into the future: "We live in a universe that is developing on every level." He was one of a group of scholars who gathered at Georgetown University to explore Passionist Fr. Thomas Berry's 'New Story' with an eye on climate change. The work toward realizing the late ecologist's prophetic vision of an ecological awakening goes on, as people of faith raise their voices in the face of setbacks: Catholics call Trump's move from Paris climate deal 'unconscionable.'

GSR's Notes from the Field returns with new bloggers who are volunteering with sisters' ministries. In her first contribution, Honorine Uwimana, a St. Joseph Worker in Orange, California, asks herself: "What if my five loaves and two fishes can nourish society?"

At NCR, Michael Sean Winters asks the question behind the synod: How can and should change happen in the church? The naysayers of the left and right need to realize the answer is not simple, he says.

The ideas of development and change predominate the insights in a hefty new book by Australian theologian Ormond Rush. Paul Lakeland reviews The Vision of

Vatican II.

ICYMI: Repeated bad experiences have informed Zita Ballinger Fletcher's view that the Latin Mass has become a cult of toxic tradition.

Advertisement

Want to keep updated with the latest news from the National Catholic Reporter? Sign up here for news updates by email — including one that will send you Copy Desk Daily every Monday through Friday.