As the coronavirus pandemic sweeps the country and the globe, we continue to learn how to mourn the loss of normalcy and security. Along with this new normal comes the fear of losing or already having lost the ones we love. Our readers often refer to NCR as a community, and in this strange and scary time, we want to expand that concept by offering you a place to remember those who have gone before us, but gave us so much.

If you have lost a friend, colleague or family member to the coronavirus, please share their story with us using the confidential form below. Thank you.
