

NEWS

SURVEY
Fictional Catholic support declines again
PAGE 3

SPECIAL SECTION

FALL & WINTER LISTINGS
Dioceses, parishes, networks and more
PAGES 7-8

COMMENTARY

EUCARIST
A statement of both unity and division
PAGE 18

NATIONAL CATHOLIC

REPORTER

THE INDEPENDENT NEWS SOURCE

McGraw-Hill

August 1-16, 2022

Vol. 58, No. 22 $2.05

Pope Francis greets the Cardinal of the National Camerillo before meeting with the National, Polish and Italian cardinals July 25 at the Vatican, Vatican.

Gay woman wins battle against US bishops to become foster parent

By BRIAN FRAGA
bfraga@ncr.org

Ruby Baker was in legal battle to become a foster parent to rescue children. But Easter still feels like she's "in limbo."

"I don't know what to make of it," Baker said of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops' opposition earlier this year that "is unfortunately" causing one of the fundraising agencies in 2021 to deny her application to become a foster parent because she is gay.

Baker and one of her sisters told NCR that they expect to find out how that fundraising agency, which she says is a Catholic-run residential care center, will respond to her application. They also expressed concern about the agency's financial stability and the agency's relationship with the state.

"I am sorry," said Francis. "I am sorry for the bishops." Continued on Page 8

Pope Francis made an historic gesture during a week-long trip to Canada in late July, kneeling before Indigenous children.

Pope apologizes to Canada's Indigenous

By CHRISTOPHER WHITE
cwhite@ncr.org

Pope Francis made an historic gesture during a week-long trip to Canada in late July, kneeling before Indigenous children. "I humbly beg forgiveness for the environmental damage that has been done to the Indigenous peoples," Francis said on July 27 during a solemn meeting with Indigenous representatives, while visiting the former residential school site.

Francis said he was "in a state of prayer" for the Indigenous peoples. "I am sorry," he said. "I am sorry for the damage that has been done to the Indigenous peoples." Continued on Page 8

Health workers led by nurses take part in a demonstration over shortages of medicines at a hospital in Harare, Zimbabwe.

Catholic hospitals struggle to aid collapsing Zimbabwe system

By TIKANDIA KAROVEDO
tkarovedo@ncr.org

Public hospitals in Zimbabwe have experienced significant shortages of medicines in recent months, with staff at many hospitals going on strike to protest over pay in a country where the rate of currency inflation has reached 100 percent.

Staff at Catholic hospitals in the southern African nation are trying to pick up the slack, but are also struggling with the workload and the nation's worsening economic conditions.

Dr. Thebe Sibilo, a physician at the Catholic-run St. Anne's Mission Hospital in Harare, Zimbabwe, has been treated in all kinds of interesting medical practices. But lately because of more frequent electricity outages, he has had to adapt to providing aid under candlelight.

"We are struggling," Sibilo told NCR of the staff at his hospital. "We have to keep going to work even when the conditions are very difficult to keep working."

In June, Sibilo's colleague and others at government-run health centers embarked on a strike demanding compensation in U.S. dollars. The job Continued on Page 10

Voters in Marietta, Georgia, line up to cast ballots in the U.S. Senate runoff election on July 5, 2022.

Climate-concerned voters ready to bring faith to midterm polls

By BRIAN ROEWE
broewe@ncr.org

With less than 90 days until the midterm elections, a national network of state-based environmental faith groups is gearing up for a final push to register their communities to vote and their own faith with voting for the election.

Since the spring, Interfaith Power & Light has mobilized its state chapters to engage their local congregations through its Faith Climate Justice Voter campaign. The effort seeks to increase the number of registered voters and to educate congregations of all religions traditions about the importance of voting and what's at stake in the coming elections for the environment, climate change and democracy.

"The reality is that in order to create the world that we built on our values, we have to vote," said Rev. Susan Strickerhoff, president of Interfaith Power & Light. "Voting is a way that we can create the world that we want to live in, and a world in which we're voting for our neighbors and voting for the environment, climate change and democracy."

Continued on Page 8

Black Catholics gathered for an in-person meeting in San Francisco.

Black Catholic groups gather for in-person meeting

By DAN STOOKMAN
dstookman@ncr.org

The new president of the National Black Sisters' Conference closed the group's annual gathering with a message, calling for Black sisters, priests, deacons and seminarians to stand with her as a witness that Black lives do matter.

Dr. Adèle Lorraine Walker of the School Sisters of Notre Dame was elected to lead the 26-year-old conference at the group's annual meeting with three other Black Catholic groups and also presided over the conference's Sacred Tables dinner, which features inspirational leaders.

Walker said she would only accept the award if those in the banquet hall would accept the responsibility that comes with being Black in a white-dominated American Catholic church.

"We can stand together, then I accept this award," she said. Continued on Page 8

COMMENTARY

GERMAN REFORM
Is this threat of reform real?
PAGE 11

SPECIAL SECTION

RELIGIOUS LIFE
Our need for spirituality, liberation of Irish women religious
PAGES 1-7

APPRECIATION

CARL KAHAT
Priest and author, member of the Society of the Sacred Mission
PAGE 12

NATIONAL CATHOLIC

REPORTER

THE INDEPENDENT NEWS SOURCE

McGraw-Hill

August 19-September 1, 2022

Vol. 58, No. 23 $2.05

Voters in Marietta, Georgia, line up to cast ballots in the U.S. Senate runoff election on July 5, 2022.

Climate-concerned voters ready to bring faith to midterm polls

By BRIAN ROEWE
broewe@ncr.org

With less than 90 days until the midterm elections, a national network of state-based environmental faith groups is gearing up for a final push to register their communities to vote and their own faith with voting for the election.

Since the spring, Interfaith Power & Light has mobilized its state chapters to engage their local congregations through its Faith Climate Justice Voter campaign. The effort seeks to increase the number of registered voters and to educate congregations of all religions traditions about the importance of voting and what's at stake in the coming elections for the environment, climate change and democracy.

"The reality is that in order to create the world that we built on our values, we have to vote," said Rev. Susan Strickerhoff, president of Interfaith Power & Light. "Voting is a way that we can create the world that we want to live in, and a world in which we're voting for our neighbors and voting for the environment, climate change and democracy."

Continued on Page 8

Black Catholics gathered for an in-person meeting in San Francisco.

Black Catholic groups gather for in-person meeting

By DAN STOOKMAN
dstookman@ncr.org

The new president of the National Black Sisters' Conference closed the group's annual gathering with a message, calling for Black sisters, priests, deacons and seminarians to stand with her as a witness that Black lives do matter.

Dr. Adèle Lorraine Walker of the School Sisters of Notre Dame was elected to lead the 26-year-old conference at the group's annual meeting with three other Black Catholic groups and also presided over the conference's Sacred Tables dinner, which features inspirational leaders.

Walker said she would only accept the award if those in the banquet hall would accept the responsibility that comes with being Black in a white-dominated American Catholic church.

"We can stand together, then I accept this award," she said. Continued on Page 8

The front pages of two recent issues of the National Catholic Reporter (NCR graphic)

by Bill Mitchell

View Author Profile

bmitchell@ncronline.org

Follow on Twitter at @bmitch

Join the Conversation

Send your thoughts to Letters to the Editor. Learn more

August 26, 2022

Share on FacebookShare on TwitterEmail to a friendPrint

When I wrote my first story for the National Catholic Reporter as a college freshman in 1967, I certainly had no idea I'd end up as its publisher and CEO a half century later.

Bill Mitchell

When I accepted the position two years ago, I told the board I would serve until my 75th birthday, with the goal of helping the board identify a longer-term publisher to lead NCR into the second half of its first century. Although my 75th birthday is a year off, NCR is on a positive trajectory and now is the time to begin the search for that next leader.

I spent the vast majority of my career in secular journalism, but the mission is fundamentally the same as what we do at NCR: to probe the issues that matter most to the communities we serve and to rely on our independence to hold the powerful accountable.

As readers and donors tell me every week, though, NCR does something more. It provides an inspirational vision of a church rooted in the Gospels and committed to values of faith and justice.

If you know of someone you believe would be the right fit, please direct them to ncr.media/pubjob for the job description and instructions on how to apply.

As ever, I thank you for your support and look forward to hearing from you.

All the best,

Bill Mitchell

816-968-2259

bmitchell@ncronline.org

Advertisement

A version of this story appeared in the Sept 2-15, 2022 print issue.